IQAC

JAC NEWS

EDITOR'S DESK

Quality has long been understood as a virtue that cannot be quantified. But in this high age of data, everything, including quality, is an objectively measurable virtue. Accreditation bodies and evaluation councils at various strata have supplied Higher Educational Institutions with unambiguous criteria against which their quality will be measured and ranked. The IQAC at JAC consistently strives to come up with practices that correlate to the revised and updated evaluation criteria of Quality Education. The institution has not only witnessed the steady development of this hillock into buzzing suburb that prioritizes higher education; it has also been the cornerstone in accomplishing that positive change. The current issue carries details and references to the latest innovations that JAC has implemented towards quality enhancement. Happy reading.
